A week your kid can see

Kids like knowing what's coming. When the week is on the wall, “What are we doing today?” has an answer they can find themselves, and you're no longer the only calendar in the house. It works across a wide range of ages: kids who don't read yet go by the pictures, and older kids can add their own labels.

What's in the set

- My week, in color, plus an outline version for kids who'd rather color their own.
- Two sheets of picture cards, grouped by category: school, sports and lessons, outings and trips; then family and friends, appointments, home, places of worship and special days. 78 cards in all, including 5 School cards for the school week.
- 5 blank cards to draw on, and 4 round Today tokens.

Print it

- US Letter, at actual size (100%), not “fit to page”, so the cards fit the slots.
- Print My week in landscape.
- Every page has half-inch margins, so nothing gets cut off at 100%.
- Card stock makes the cards last. Plain paper works if you laminate.

Put it together

1. Cut the cards apart on the dashed lines.
2. Laminate My week and the cards if you can. Then the same page works every week, and a dry-erase marker on the write-in lines wipes off.
3. Stick a hook-and-loop dot on the back of each card and in each day slot. Sticky tack works too.
4. Make a card bank for the cards not in use: a sheet of card stock with a few rows of hook-and-loop strip, hung beside My week. Every card stays in sight and easy to grab. A small craft box with compartments wide and tall enough for the cards also keeps them sorted.

Use it every week

- Reset it together before each week starts, such as Saturday evening. Last week's cards go back to the card bank; you say what's coming, and your kid places the new ones.
- Write on the line if you like, to make a card specific: “Dr. Lee”, “Maya's party”. It's optional; the pictures work on their own. Wipe it off when the card goes back.
- Each morning, your kid moves the Today token to the new day.
- Blank cards are for anything the set doesn't have. Kids remember the ones they draw.
- When plans change, move the card together and say why.

Safety Hook-and-loop dots, sticky tack and small magnets are choking hazards. Keep them away from babies and toddlers. Don't use strong (rare-earth) magnets: they're dangerous if swallowed.

Gantry is a household app for parents with young children: schedules, tasks and logistics in one place, shared by the whole family.

Free for home and classroom use.

See how it works: trygantry.com

My week

My name is .....

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
today	today	today	today	today	today	today

My week

My name is .....

today today today today today today today

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday

Picture cards · Sheet 1: School, activities and outings

Cut along the dashed lines

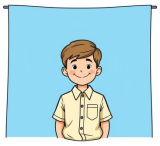

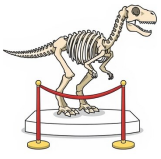

For grown-ups: write any label you like (Dr. Lee, pizza party), or leave it blank. Print on card stock or laminate. Velcro and magnets are a choking hazard for little ones. Last cells: draw your own cards.

Free printable from Gantry · trygantry.com

Picture cards · Sheet 2: Home, family and special days

Cut along the dashed lines

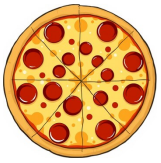

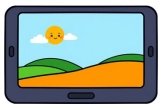

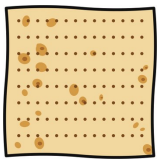

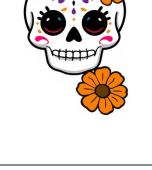

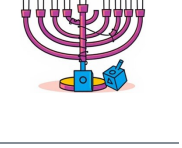

For grown-ups: write any label you like (Dr. Lee, pizza party), or leave it blank. Print on card stock or laminate. Velcro and magnets are a choking hazard for little ones. Last cells: draw your own cards, plus 4 Today markers to move each morning.

Free printable from Gantry · trygantry.com